

Language at Work Conference Research Advances in Social Sciences

Facultat de Ciències Jurídiques de la Universitat Rovira i Virgili (URV)
(Tarragona, Catalonia, Spain)

Open Call for Participation

Aims and Scope

The conference aims to foster discussion among social scientists about the relations between language and work, including occupations, labor processes and employment conditions. Within this broad field, the conference will focus on the central role language plays in labor processes. We start from the centrality of language in the information society, since information is linguistically coded and, for a wide range of products and services, language becomes raw material. Language is thus a key component of productivity, employability, wages, and control. First and additional languages, computer languages, numerical systems, scripts or protocols can be approached as today's working tools that must be mastered by professionals on an everyday basis. Beyond the classical "language industries" whose outputs are books or translations, today's conversations and texts are produced in a wide range of workplaces where they can be understood as the final product of the labor process.

Adopting an interdisciplinary perspective, the conference will bring together scholars engaged in research on workplace language skills and their implications for broader social and economic concerns, including social and economic inclusion, job security, long-life learning, unionization, gender inequalities, and wage differentials.

Topics:

- Defining and measuring language skills related to job performance
- Language standardization/agency and production processes
- "Linguistic-jobs" and "non-linguistic" jobs
- Non-natural languages in the labor market. Technical and numerical languages.
- Professions and sectorial language. Jargons, company speak.
- Language skills, wages, employment, and employability
- Language as raw material, tool, and product
- Language, hiring, and promotion
- Social and economic implications of language work
